

Theology and Religious Studies With the Chaplaincy Ministry Concentration Bachelor of Arts 2025-2026

General Areas of Service:

A degree in Theology and Religious Studies with the Chaplaincy Ministry concentration provides students with a wide range of skills in theology and introduces them specifically to aspects of ministry that focus on chaplaincy as a career option. Most students earning this concentration are interested in pursuing a career in chaplaincy or pastoral ministry. Other students use it as the basis for pursuing more specialized careers in education, advanced graduate work, or even law.

Professional Training:

An undergraduate degree in Theology and Religious Studies with the Chaplaincy Ministry concentration prepares students to pursue an undergraduate internship in chaplaincy more competitively and, upon graduation, to seek a graduate degree in Chaplaincy, or a Master of Divinity with a Chaplaincy Concentration, which is the standard educational pathway for a career in Chaplaincy. Students who are hired following graduation as a chaplaincy intern in a healthcare institution typically spend a year in a Clinical Pastoral Education program, before being sponsored to seminary. Students not receiving a chaplaincy internship are responsible for pursuing their own graduate education.

Job Outlook:

With an increasing number of individuals in the US identifying as "spiritual" rather than "religious," the demand for spiritual care beyond traditional religious institutions is on the rise. Consequently, the outlook for future employment as a chaplain is promising. In North America, chaplaincy stands as the fastest-growing field of specialized ministry. (See www.bls.gov)

Earnings:

The annual wage for chaplains depends on a number of factors, including employer, experience, education and location. According to Payscale.com, the median salary of chaplains as of 2023 was $54,462.

Note:

Exit Exams: Theology and Religious Studies majors must successfully complete a Senior Comprehensive Examination to graduate.

Minor: Theology and Religious Studies majors are required to take a minor. Students who taking both the Chaplaincy and Pastoral Ministry concentrations are encouraged to select the Biblical Languages minor. This minor gives students the greatest amount of flexibility in arranging their class schedule and thus graduating within four years.

Internship Program: Majors pursuing the Chaplaincy Ministry concentration must complete three quarters of an internship program that is approved by the School of Theology. More details about this program can be found in the School of Theology Handbook.

Endorsement Process: Majors who want to receive a recommendation for denominational hiring need to gain Endorsement by a two-step process described in the School of Theology Handbook, which is described in the School of Theology Handbook.

*The Holy Lands Study Tour takes place during summer quarter; offered in odd years

- Chaplaincy Concentration students must participate in an internship of 60 hours (approved in advance by the School of Theology).
- Chaplaincy Concentration students are required to attend at least 6 Colloquia over their first 2 years, & 6 over the last 2 years.
- Chaplaincy Concentration students are required to attend the Senior Retreat in the Spring Quarter of the year they graduate.
- Students are strongly advised to attend the annual Theology Retreats.
